Sector Explanation and Detail—Limited Duration

U.S. Treasury Bonds

 Treasuries are held as a source of funds for other opportunistic investments and as a safe harbor investment. Treasuries tend to perform particularly well during times of crisis.

Treasury Inflation-Protected Securities (TIPS)

TIPS are held as a hedge against inflation. TIPS pay a fixed interest rate plus an adjustment for realized inflation. TIPS frequently rise in value during periods of rising interest rates.

Federal Agency Securities

Agency debentures are issued by FHLB, FNMA, FHLMC, FFCB and other agencies of the U.S. government. Agencies generally offer modest yield enhancement over U.S. Treasury securities with little additional risk.

Corporate Bonds

• Potentially significant source of enhanced yield in exchange for credit risk and less liquidity.

Mortgage-Backed Securities (MBS)

 Potentially significant source of cash flow and enhanced income generation. Principal amortization and prepayments can be an excellent source of funds in a rising-rate environment. Similar credit status to Federal Agency securities.

Commercial MBS (GNMA project loans)

 Potentially significant source of enhanced income. Corporate bond-like principal return with a generally small degree of call risk. Full faith and credit of the U.S. government.

Taxable Municipal Bonds

• Limited liquidity in exchange for a vehicle with above-average credit profile relative to enhanced income. High credit quality and excess income opportunity.
